Greta Gerwig's Barbie reigned supreme at this weekend's box office with a $155 million take.

It's the best opening for a film directed by a woman solo or as a team, the previous records being held by Wonder Woman and Captain Marvel respectively.

 A Science Enthusiast is watching Barbie the Movie at AMC Theatres-Indianapolis 17.

I just saw the Barbie movie, and here are my thoughts while they're fresh.

████████ POTENTIAL SPOILER ALERT ██████████

Barbie and Ken go to real people land and gleefully share that they lack any/all genitalia (nice). But when the real people go to Barbieland, what happens? Do they still have their genitalia? Or does their genitalia become non-existent as well?
